The Enforcement of Decrees in Equity

Huston Charles Andrews
HARVARD STUDIES IN JURISPRUDENCE

VOLUME I
THE ENFORCEMENT OF DECREES IN EQUITY

BY

CHARLES ANDREWS HUSTON, S.J.D.

PROFESSOR OF LAW IN STANFORD UNIVERSITY
RESEARCH SCHOLAR IN HARVARD LAW SCHOOL, 1912-1913

CAMBRIDGE
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON: HUMPHREY MILFORD
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
1915
Dissertation submitted to the Faculty of Harvard Law School in compliance with the terms of the Research Scholarship, June 16, 1913

COPYRIGHT, 1915
BY CHARLES ANDREWS HUSTON
To ROSCOE POUND
THIS ESSAY IS GRATEFULLY DEDICATED
PREFATORY NOTE

This essay is written primarily to advocate an enlargement of the equity powers of American courts which will enable them to give a real effect to their decrees; for example, to transfer titles directly instead of by ordering a litigant to make the transfer. This is no innovation. Such power exists in more or less perfect form in most of the states of the Union. Its operation is not a matter of conjecture, but can be observed over a period of more than a century of practice, and in a wide variety of social conditions. But some states, and it is believed the Federal jurisdictions also, lack this power. Moreover it nowhere exists fully for all cases and its need has become more apparent to-day because of a definite trend in our legislation aiming at a restriction of the contempt process which constitutes the original, and still here and there the only, enforcing agency of our courts of equity.

But although the primary purpose of the essay is thus to urge a specific reform of happily no very extended character, the treatment given the subject has aimed at considering it in the light of its wider juristic aspects. It is regarded, in the first place, as a phase of the tendency to enlarge the remedial powers of our courts, to make their administration of relief more accurate and more effective than is possible now, where specific relief, either reparatory or preventive, is regarded as on the whole merely auxiliary to the substitutional relief of damages. And, in the second place, it is regarded as a part of the movement which has gradually attenuated the function of a trustee or other holder of the legal title to property, until to-day the beneficial owner who holds the equitable title is all but recognized as the real owner, his rights good against all the world, subject only to a power in his representative, the holder of the legal title, to cut off his rights by a transfer to a bona fide purchaser.

Not only for the suggestion of the field of investigation traversed by this discussion but for constant inspiration during the progress of the inquiry and for unlimited generosity in concrete suggestion and criticism the author is indebted to his friend and teacher, Professor Roscoe Pound of Harvard University. And to his friend and fellow student, Professor George Luther Clark of the University of Missouri, the author wishes also to make grateful acknowledgment of his generous interest and helpful criticisms.