Golden tips. A description of Ceylon and its great tea industry

Cave Henry
Opinions of the Press on the First Edition of this Work.

The Athenaeum.—Mr. Cave seems to hold a brief for the whole island of Ceylon, with its varied attractions. . . . The charm of Cingalese life and nature is depicted with glowing colours and interesting details. . . . The simple, peaceful village life and the busier and more stirring existence of the townpeople with their varied avocations are equally well described.

Westminster Gazette.—Mr. H. W. Cave has given us a most fascinating and picturesque account of Ceylon. No one will read the book, with its entrancing photographs, without wishing to set out at once to the enchanted island.

The Daily News.—Mr. Cave’s well-written and beautifully illustrated book should interest the investor no less than the seeker after recreation and the picturesque.

The Morning Post.—A most graphic and pleasing account of Ceylon and its great tea industry.

The Daily Graphic.—The author’s descriptions of journeys about the island are thoroughly well done, and we are enabled to appreciate better all that he has to say by means of the numerous beautiful illustrations.

Birmingham Daily Post.—A more delightful book on Ceylon could not be wished for.

Standard.—Mr. H. W. Cave deserves well of Ceylon. He has done an immense amount of work in making the attractions of the Colony known to the reading public who reside in other parts of the Empire. His latest work is a splendid effort.

Ceylon Times.—Mr. Henry W. Cave’s latest addition to the descriptive books upon our beautiful island will be welcomed on many sides. The Government cadet or the intending colonist and their relatives at home; the officers and men of the regiments ordered here; the scientific and botanic tourist; the visitors anxious to look after their varied interests—either agricultural or commercial—who yearly flock to Ceylon in greater numbers; and last, but assuredly the most important, that ever increasing increment of pleasure-seekers who yearly bring money to the island, lavishly enough spent, and which is distributed fairly generally—all these can read every word of “Golden Tips” with the result that the desire to see Ceylon will thereby be increased tenfold. Those already resident here will find the book a most desirable present for friends at home, giving them a detailed and vivid description of the beauties and industries of the island scarcely to be achieved by the best letter-writer.

Times of India.—Mr. Henry W. Cave, M.A., F.R.G.S., of Colombo, is a recognised authority on Ceylon. He has lived on the island for many years, and his books have shown not only that he has a thorough knowledge of his subject, but also that he can describe places and scenes in an attractive way. . . . It would be impossible to find a book more suitable for the average reader than Mr. Cave’s latest work. It tells just what the ordinary man or woman wants to know.
