IN my husband's last prayer at the family altar, offered seven days before his death, while sitting in his chair,— in great feebleness of body, but with a pleading fervency of spirit,— he gave utterance to these supplications:—

“Regard in tender compassion my kindred; may their hearts and their influence be wholly the Lord's! Richly bless all the dear people to whom I have so imperfectly ministered; may no one of them neglect or refuse the Great Salvation!”

In the hope that, by bringing some of his words to their remembrance, these petitions may be answered, I have compiled these pages.
