THE great and increasing success that "Chit-Chat by Puck," has met with at the hands of the English and American press, has induced the publishers to bring out a second series of Richard Gustafsson's fairy-tales. That these bright stories find favour also with the children themselves is evidenced by the fact that two editions of "Chit-Chat by Puck," issued first for the Christmas of last year, have already been called for. It is hoped that this little volume also may meet with the approval that its predecessor has been fortunate enough to achieve.

Simultaneously with this second collection of Gustafsson's tales, a third is issued, under the title "Woodland Notes." These three volumes, forming a complete translation of the "Sagor," "Nya Sagor," "Berättelser," and "Svenska Taflor" (1875-77), will also be published together in one volume, entitled "Tea-time Tales for Young Little Folks and Young Old Folks," thus presenting to the English child, entire and in translation, the complete household book of fairy tales that is the great delight of his near relation, the Swedish child.

October, 1880.
