EDITOR'S NOTICE.

THE Editor has pursued the same course in this as in the first volume. While he trusts no titles will appear to have been neglected, he is sure that special evidence will be found under the several titles, — Carriers, including the law applicable to railroads, express and telegraph companies; Case, including the much vexed subject of Negligence; Damages, and Insurance, — that the courts have been largely occupied with questions arising thereunder since the last edition. Some seven hundred cases have been added to this volume; not all indeed new, but such, nevertheless, as it seemed to the Editor would be both useful and interesting to the profession.

J. W. M.

Boston, November, 1876.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE FIFTH EDITION.

THIS edition was prepared for the press by the lamented Author, and is given to the Profession as left by him at his death. Whether he had completed its preparation is not known, but the additional notes were left in the finished and perfect state which characterized all his works, and give reason to believe that his labors were done. The additions are not numerous, but they possess a peculiar interest, as being the last contributions of the Author to that science which his labors through life had done so much to illustrate.

Boston, January, 1854.
