the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are living in poverty has increased from 1.2 billion to 1.6 billion (World Bank 2000).

There are a number of reasons for this increase in poverty. One of the main reasons is the rapid population growth in the developing countries. The population of the world is expected to reach 8 billion by the year 2025 (United Nations 2000). This rapid population growth is putting a strain on the natural resources of the world, particularly in the developing countries.

Another reason for the increase in poverty is the rapid technological change in the developed countries. The rapid technological change is creating a demand for highly skilled workers, which is leading to a widening gap between the rich and the poor in the developed countries.

There are a number of ways in which the world can reduce poverty. One of the most important ways is to invest in education and health care. Education and health care are essential for people to improve their living standards and to escape poverty.

Another way to reduce poverty is to promote economic growth in the developing countries. Economic growth is essential for people to improve their living standards and to escape poverty.

There are a number of ways in which the world can promote economic growth in the developing countries. One of the most important ways is to invest in infrastructure. Infrastructure is essential for economic growth, and investing in infrastructure can help to improve the living standards of people in the developing countries.

Another way to promote economic growth in the developing countries is to attract foreign investment. Foreign investment is essential for economic growth, and attracting foreign investment can help to improve the living standards of people in the developing countries.

There are a number of ways in which the world can attract foreign investment in the developing countries. One of the most important ways is to improve the business environment. A good business environment is essential for attracting foreign investment, and improving the business environment can help to attract foreign investment to the developing countries.

Another way to attract foreign investment in the developing countries is to improve the quality of the workforce. A high quality workforce is essential for economic growth, and improving the quality of the workforce can help to attract foreign investment to the developing countries.
