"THE AMERICAN DUCHESS"

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS regret to have occasion to announce to the reading public that the story recently published by them under the title of "Aboard the 'American Duchess,'" a story purporting to be the work of an American author who writes under the name of George L. Myers, is a plagiarism of a story published some years back by Mr. Headon Hill, of London, entitled "The Queen of Night." Mr. Hill's material has been appropriated by the American writer, such appropriation constituting a wrong against the English author and his publishers, and also, of course, against the American publishers, who accepted as an original work the story, "Aboard the 'American Duchess.'" The publishers are making this announcement in order to caution American readers against the purchase, under a wrong impression, of the story, issued under the title of "Aboard the 'American Duchess.'"
