What is and what might be, a study of education in general and elementary education in particular

Holmes Edmond
Title: What is and what might be, a study of education in general and elementary education in particular

Author: Holmes Edmond

This is an exact replica of a book. The book reprint was manually improved by a team of professionals, as opposed to automatic/OCR processes used by some companies. However, the book may still have imperfections such as missing pages, poor pictures, errant marks, etc. that were a part of the original text. We appreciate your understanding of the imperfections which can not be improved, and hope you will enjoy reading this book.
WHAT IS AND WHAT MIGHT BE...
THE ATHENÆUM

"Mr. Holmes's statements deserve the most careful consideration, for his experience in all matters affecting schools and scholars is probably unrrivalled, and no living Englishman has had greater opportunities of mastering the details of his subject—especially as it is presented in elementary schools—than he."

THE SPECTATOR

"In the happiest pages of this volume—pages which are worth a whole mountain of Blue Books—he has painted a picture which seems rather a golden dream than a reality, but which is none the less, he tells us, an exact representation of actual fact. It is only the picture of a little village school... but it appeals at once both to the head and to the heart."

WESTMINSTER GAZETTE

"The book is so 'live' and the subject so vitally important, that anything like mere compliment seems out of place. But it is the simple truth that this is one of those rare books which no one who has the welfare of his country at heart can afford to leave unstudied."
WHAT IS AND WHAT MIGHT BE

A STUDY OF EDUCATION IN GENERAL AND ELEMENTARY EDUCATION IN PARTICULAR

BY

EDMOND HOLMES

AUTHOR OF

SIXTH IMPRESSION

IMPORTED BY

E. P. DUTTON & COMPANY

31 WEST TWENTY-THIRD STREET
NEW YORK
First published, May 1911.
Second impression, July 1911.
Third impression, September 1911.
Fourth impression, November 1911.
Fifth impression, January 1912.
Sixth impression, October 1912.
PREFACE

My aim, in writing this book, is to show that the externalism of the West, the prevalent tendency to pay undue regard to outward and visible "results" and to neglect what is inward and vital, is the source of most of the defects that vitiate Education in this country, and therefore that the only remedy for those defects is the drastic one of changing our standard of reality and our conception of the meaning and value of life. My reason for making a special study of that branch of education which is known as "Elementary," is that I happen to have a more intimate knowledge of it than of any other branch, the inside of an elementary school being so familiar to me that I can in some degree bring the eye of experience to bear upon the problems that confront its teachers. I do not for a moment imagine that the elementary school teacher is more deeply tainted than his fellows with the virus of "Occidentalism." Nor do I think that the defects of his schools are graver than those of other educational institutions. In my judgment they are less grave because, though perhaps more glaring, they have not had time to become so deeply rooted, and are therefore, one may surmise, less difficult to eradicate. Also there is at least a breath of healthy discontent stirring in the field of elementary education, a breath which sometimes blows the mist away and gives us sudden gleams of sunshine, whereas over the higher levels of the educational world there hangs the heavy stupor of profound self-satisfaction.¹ I am not exaggerating when I say that at this moment there are elementary schools in England in which the life of the children is emancipative and educative to an extent which is unsurpassed, and perhaps unequalled, in any other type or grade of school.

I am careful to say all this because I foresee that, without a “foreword” of explanation, my adverse criticism of what I have called “a familiar type of school” may be construed into an attack on the elementary teachers as a body. I should be very sorry if such a construction were put upon it. No one knows better than I do that the elementary teachers of this country are the victims of a vicious conception of education which has behind it twenty centuries of tradition and prescription, and the malign influence of which was intensified in their case by thirty years or more ² of Code despotism and “payment by results.” Handicapped as they have been by this and other adverse conditions, they have yet produced a noble band of pioneers, to whom I, for one, owe what little I know about the inner meaning of education; and if I take an ¹ By “self-satisfaction” I mean satisfaction with the existing system as a system. That strenuous efforts are being made to improve the system, within its own limits, I can well believe. But the system itself, with the defects and limitations which are of its essence, seems to be regarded as adequate, and even as final, by nearly all who work under it.

² 1862 to 1895 A.D.
unduly high standard in judging of their work, the reason is that they themselves, by the brilliance of their isolated achievements, have compelled me to take it. I will therefore ask them to bear with me, while I expose with almost brutal candour the shortcomings of many of their schools. They will understand that all the time I am thinking of education in general even more than of elementary education, and using my knowledge of the latter to illustrate statements and arguments which are really intended to tell against the former. They will also understand that at the back of my mind I am laying the blame of their failures, not on them but on the hostile forces which have been too strong for many of them,—on the false assumptions of Western philosophy, on the false standards and false ideals of Western civilisation, on various "old, unhappy, far-off things," the effects of which are still with us, foremost among these being that deadly system of "payment by results" which seems to have been devised for the express purpose of arresting growth and strangling life, which bound us all, myself included, with links of iron, and which had many zealous agents, of whom I, alas! was one.
CONTENTS

PART I
WHAT IS, OR THE PATH OF MECHANICAL OBEDIENCE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CHAP.</th>
<th>PAGE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>III</td>
<td>87</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

PART II
WHAT MIGHT BE, OR THE PATH OF SELF-REALISATION

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>IV</th>
<th>153</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>V</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VI</td>
<td>235</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>